

leave the matter in abeyance for the present.

A telegram from Nazim Pacha reads: "There was no serious fighting to-day. A slight cannonade and fusillade were exchanged at the right and left wings. We have collected the arms and other effects abandoned yesterday by the enemy."

Truly Oriental Expedition.

It is generally believed that the object of the authorities in quartering nearly two thousand cholera patients in the Mosque of St. Sophia is to deter any enemies from setting foot within the building. The talk in the Sofia papers regarding the celebration of Te Deums in that historic pile undoubtedly produced an impression on the Turkish government, which resorted to this truly Oriental expedient of thwarting such a design.

A letter from Drama says that long before the Bulgarians approached the town the authorities were seized with panic, and besought the foreign consuls to arrange a peaceful surrender. Next day the Governor, the military commander and the commander of the gendarmerie, attired in mufti, abandoned the place, while many of the soldiers and gendarmes imitated their example.

The position at the Tchataldja lines was described by Nazim Pacha in a telegram to the Turkish War Office, timed 12:15 p. m. to-day, as follows:

Reports received at this moment state that the enemy facing our left wing withdrew completely last night in the direction of the slopes of Papaz Burgas. Our reconnoitring parties counted over five hundred dead Bulgarians on the slopes in the environs of Tchataldja railroad station. From their epaulettes it was established that the dead soldiers belonged to the 1st Infantry Regiment of Sofia. A number of rifles, caps and officers' swords were brought in by our troops.

According to statements made by Bulgarian prisoners, the enemy has been without food for three days and is retreating. The Bulgarians were unable to carry away all their wounded.

The morale of our troops is very good. A wireless dispatch from the commander of the Turkish battleship Torgut Reis, timed 1 a. m., November 20, reports that a Turkish detachment operating from Derkos, aided by the fire of the ship's guns, drove back the Bulgarians in the direction of Ormanli and Karaburun for a distance of ten miles.

PLENIPOTENTIARIES TO DISCUSS TERMS TO-DAY

Turkish, Bulgarian and Servian Commanders Order Cessation of Hostilities.

London, Nov. 20.—The war has shifted for a time from the field of arms to that of diplomacy. It may be that the war is near to an end. Plenipotentiaries for the belligerent powers will meet to-morrow at the village of Hademkeul, a few miles outside the capital, for a preliminary discussion of the terms of an armistice.

In the mean time, the Turkish, Bulgarian and Servian commanders have ordered a cessation of hostilities, although cannonading, which Nazim Pacha reports as unimportant, occurred this morning.

The sweeping terms which the allies were said to have demanded yesterday as a basis for the armistice appear not to have been advanced, but the plenipotentiaries may not know the levels of the platform until they meet for the discussion, and it is almost certain that it will be on the basis of the Balkan States holding all the conquered country until a permanent treaty of peace is signed.

How many vestiges of his former power they are prepared to concede the Turk depends largely on two factors—the strength and supplies of the allied army threatening the gates of Constantinople and the extent to which the cholera spectre has embarrassed their plans.

Great Transport Difficulties.

It is certain that great transport difficulties hamper the Bulgarian army on account of the distance from its base and the rough roads. The cholera is counted on by the Turks to weaken the Bulgarian ambition for a triumphal march into the capital and the celebration of mass in St. Sophia. But to make assurance doubly sure, the Turk has resorted to the amazing plan of transforming the mosque into a pesthouse and has crowded 2,000 cholera stricken patients within its walls.

Simultaneously with the lull on the battlefield comes news of a diminution of tension in the Austro-Servian dispute by the compliance of Servia with the demand of the Austrian government for an investigation on the spot. The Austro-Hungarian Consul at Belgrade was due to start to-day for Pristina to inquire into the complaint of the Austro-Hungarian Consul there that he had been hindered by the Servians in the carrying out of his duties. Part of the journey must be made on horseback, and it will take several days for him to arrive at his destination.

Relations Still in Peril.

On the other hand, there is nothing yet to indicate a solution of the question of the Servian demand for ports on the Adriatic Sea. If, as is threatened, she diverts her army released by and it will lead you in the right direction.

A person, when sick, is very apt to grasp at a straw. Unworthy articles are alluringly advertised to cure all manner of ills and you are made the goat for experiment unless you use common sense. Everbody is occasionally or frequently in the throes of a bilious attack of which all the symptoms are nature's danger signals for you to do something before it is too late. Headache, bad stomach and constipation are the forerunners of most intestinal diseases. Attacked in time, in a common sense way, they soon pass over. Study your case and study the remedy. Take something which nature has furnished and which is untouched nor altered by human hands. A natural remedy is the choice of every doctor. Hunyadi Janos Water is his choice. TWO OF THE PLENIPOTENTIARIES TO ARRANGE AN ARMISTICE.

It is believed in well informed circles that this step will lead quickly to the end of the war between Turkey and the Balkan allies.

CHRISTIANS REPORTED MASSACRED AT JAFFA

Three Important American Missionary Stations Near City—Russia Sends Cruiser.

Athens, Nov. 20.—Reports of massacres of Christians in Jaffa, Palestine, caused the commander of the Russian cruiser Oleg to weigh anchor and depart hurriedly for that district to-day.

Five Christian missionary societies are represented in Jaffa. The Christian and Missionary Alliance has a station with one man, the Church Missionary Society for Africa and the East, two men and two women; the London Society for the Promotion of Christianity among the Jews, two men and two women; the Seventh Day Adventist Mission Board, one man and one woman, and the Tabernacle Mission School, four women. There is also an American orphanage.

There are supposed to be about ten thousand Christians among the inhabitants, the total of whom is estimated at about forty thousand. There are eight Christian Churches and four Jewish synagogues. There is an English hospital and a French hospital.

Washington, Nov. 20.—Although without confirmation of the reported massacre of Christians in Jaffa, the officials here admit they have been apprehensive of such troubles on the Syrian coast, where the religious differences between the Mohammedans and the Christians are more pronounced than in any other part of the Ottoman Empire.

American interests in that quarter are large, not only owing to the extensive fruit trade, but because of the presence of a large number of American missionary and educational institutions. Within twenty miles of Jaffa, which is the port of Jerusalem, are three important American missionary stations—Taybeh, Hama and Ain-Arsek. There is also a large Jewish population, but so far it is not known that they have been disturbed by the Turks or Arabs, whose ill feeling appears to be directed solely against the Christians.

Two foreign warships have been lying at Beirut, about 20 miles north of Jaffa, and presumably one of these has been dispatched to the latter port. Rear Admiral Knight, on the armored cruiser Tennessee, is now speeding directly for Beirut. His ship is due at Gibraltar to-morrow, but it will require almost a week's time for the cruiser to take on and traverse the length of the Mediterranean to the Syrian coast.

The State Department has been congratulating itself upon the immunity of American interests from injury during the present war. To-day a cable message from Beirut, dated November 19, comes from Salonic, in the very center of the field of war, reporting that all Americans and American interests there and at Cavalla, which is now occupied by Bulgarian regulars, were safe.

TURKS APPEAL FOR FUNDS

Red Crescent Asks Money to Succor Famine Sufferers.

The following appeal of the Ottoman Red Crescent, co-operating with the American Red Cross, was issued yesterday:

The horrors of war, accompanied by unspeakably shocking hardships and misery, which are aggravated and embittered by the unmerciful ravages of nature—famine and pestilence—are now in a measure unparalleled in the annals of modern warfare. Famine, villages, homes within the zone of the most terrible calamity—Jew, Gentile, Mohammedan, strikings and afflicted in the pangs of an unyielding, ravensome scourge—now raise their most suppliant voice for the sympathy and generosity of the civilized world.

The American branch of the Ottoman Red Crescent, which counts among its patrons Yousouf Zia Pacha, Ottoman Ambassador in Washington, and Oscar S. Straus and is working in conjunction with the American Red Cross, presents itself as the intermediary in behalf of humanity before the Ottoman Government, irrespective of creed and race, and before the American people, who have always liberally responded to the appeal of the unfortunate and needy.

All contributions may be sent to Jacob H. Schiff, No. 23 William street, or to Mr. H. H. Hader, M. D., treasurer of the Red Crescent, No. 89 Broad street, New York City.

ROJAS KILLED IN BATTLE

Rebel Chief Reported Slain in Canyon by Rurales.

Mexico City, Nov. 20.—General Antonio Rojas, one of the most influential of the rebel leaders and a strong supporter of the Federal Government, was killed in a canyon with rural guards, according to unofficial advices to the government. The encounter occurred in San Joaquin canyon, in the State of Chihuahua, the rurales being commanded by General José Blanco.

The rebel leader, Cheche Campos, operating in the State of Durango, has cut the Central Railway to the south of Torreón. There have been many protests against the withdrawal of the troops from the north to aid the campaign in the south.

PLANS TO AID JEWS IN WAR.

The Federation of Oriental Jews of America will hold a conference on Sunday evening in the Auditorium of the Educational Alliance, Jefferson street and East Broadway, for the purpose of effecting plans to aid the Jews fighting on both sides in the war between the Balkan States and Turkey. Oscar S. Straus will address the meeting, and efforts will be made to enlist the aid of all Jewish organizations in this country.

BULGARIANS SUCCESSFUL BEFORE TCHATALDJA LINES

Correspondent Throws New and Unexpected Light on Fighting Early in the Week.

[By Cable to The Tribune.] London, Nov. 21.—Ashmead Bartlett, "The Daily Telegraph's" war correspondent with the Ottoman army, in a dispatch dated November 18, via Constantinople, throws a new and unexpected light on the operations at Tchataldja and indicates that the Bulgarians accomplished a good deal more in the assault on the chain of forts than is generally supposed.

At 1 o'clock on Monday morning, according to the dispatch, the Bulgarians concentrated their infantry against the advanced works in front of Hademkeul and delivered an attack with decisive effect, the whole works falling into their hands after three-quarters of an hour's fighting at the point of the bayonet. The Bulgarians are now established in an arc made by the receding circle of hills which form the main line of the defence, and are in a position to attack the main line around Hademkeul itself. But what is still more serious is the fact that they can enfilade the left wing of the Turkish position, and if they pierce the centre at Hademkeul both wings will be cut off and obliged to retire in confusion if they escape at all.

Having captured the outer works, the Bulgarians again devoted the entire day to a tremendous bombardment of the remaining works, and also demoralizing the reserves by concentrating their fire on the exposed camps in the early part of the morning. This fire on the camps was not very effective, as the light and conditions for shooting were not favorable, owing to the mist, and in consequence a majority of the shells burst too high; but when the day cleared the shooting once more resumed its oldtime accuracy, and the effects became painfully evident among the troops of the first army. A steady dribble of men began to leave the lines and make for the rear and for shelter. Apparently no efforts were made to stop them, and soon whole battalions began to clear off in a mass and whole army corps showed signs of breaking up and retreating in confusion.

Throughout the morning the Turkish artillery hardly replied to the enemy's fire, being either chary of disclosing its position or else short of ammunition. It is evident that this bombardment of the lines of the first corps was intended only to demoralize the troops and keep in check any attempts to make a counter attack against the main Bulgarian attack against Hademkeul. During the morning and afternoon no infantry attack was delivered against the main position, which was subjected to the same concentrated bombardment to which the outer works had been subjected on the previous day.

When the correspondent left the field the position was this: The Bulgarians occupy all the advanced works. They have established artillery in them, and now are bombarding the centre of the main line of defence around Hademkeul, evidently with the intention of delivering an infantry assault late in the evening. If this attack should succeed the famous lines are won, and the Turkish army has no alternative but to retire to Constantinople. If the army once again starts to retreat it will break up altogether, as all question of an early retirement through the mountainous country in the rear is out of the question, and the retreat will be merely a repetition of those scenes witnessed after the battle of Lule Burgas, with the army eventually arriving in Istanbul instead of Tchataldja.

In a later message the same correspondent states that operations seemed more in the nature of a reconnaissance in force, and the Bulgarians have withdrawn to the positions held before the attack.

The correspondent fully confirms the terrible cholera scenes, the horror of which, he says, can never fade from his mind. As there were no medical arrangements the victims were simply thrown out to die. Then the body was hastily covered with a thin layer of earth.

"These ghastly mounds," he says, "litter the whole country; there is no escaping them. But these horrid scenes in the villages pale in significance as compared with the horrors of Hademkeul, where the remnants of the defeated army finally rallied. These men, who lived for ten days on green corn or scraps of offal picked up on the march, yield the greatest number of victims. I never actually entered the village of Hademkeul, because the sights outside caused me to turn my horse in the opposite direction. The valley in which Hademkeul lies, viewed from the hills, is the valley of the shadow of death."

DIES AT D. U. MEETING

Civil Engineer Stricken with Apoplexy at Hotel Brevoort.

Andrew Buchanan, a civil engineer and contractor, of Chambersburg, Penn., died suddenly last night at the Hotel Brevoort, while attending a session of the trustees of the Delta Upsilon fraternity. The meeting had been called pursuant to instructions received from the convention recently held at the University of Wisconsin, and the first of the questions as to fraternity policy, which had been referred to the trustees, was being discussed, when Mr. Buchanan was seen to sway in his chair and then fall to the floor.

Dr. J. Milton Mabbott, of No. 19 Fifth avenue, was sent for while the fraternity men vainly endeavored to revive Mr. Buchanan. They were still working over the stricken man when the physician arrived. Dr. Mabbott said death had been almost instantaneous, and was probably due to apoplexy.

After Mr. Buchanan's body had been removed the meeting was again called to order, and resolutions of regret were passed. Louis Oppenheim, a classmate of Mr. Buchanan, was appointed a committee of one to notify his family, consisting of a wife, son and two daughters. The dinner which was to follow the meeting was abandoned.

Transplanting a Business

HARDY trees, sometimes, achieve a measure of growth on rocky hillsides under seemingly impossible conditions. Many a manufacturing or wholesale business is so unfavorably located as to remind one of such trees. There is nothing more wasteful than to compel a business to struggle against unfavorable conditions which could readily be avoided for all time by just once transplanting the business.

That is why nearly 200 manufacturers and wholesalers have moved their plants to Bush Terminal, where energy need not be expended in contending with adverse conditions. No matter how large or small your business you will probably find that Bush Terminal fits its requirements.
